But whose homeland?

LARRY SILVERSTEIN DEMANDS
BAILOUT FOR HIS TWIN TOWERS ...

... PLUS OVERSEAS INVASION
FOR "HOMELAND SECURITY"

Background

Following the bombing of the World Trade Center, the US Army notified Israel that some 4,000 of the 5,200 missing were believed to be Jews. Larry Silverstein, lessor of the building, demanded that the twin towers be rebuilt and that he and such stock-brokerage firms as Oppenheimer, Lehman and Cantor be bailed out with billions of dollars. President George W. Bush, backed by the Jewish Anti-Defamation League, announced that he favored a "new kind of war" by launching invasions overseas against the foes of Israel. He approved a $40 billion bailout on top of $60 billion already conveyed to Israel. Nationalists rejoined that although they found widespread support for immigration reforms, which would keep both Jews and Arabs out of the country and repatriate those already here, they found no support for military adventurism abroad. Nationalists said that Israel had made America a target and that the White House should assure that American soil should not be a personal battleground between Israel and Afghanistan. They, also, warned of domestic subversion from the Black Moslems and Israeli lobby teaming up with their counterparts abroad.

In an address to Congress, Bush demanded that Afghanistan turn over guerilla-leader Osama bin Laden or "face the consequences." When the ruling Taliban insisted on proof before approving any extradition, Bush refused. Young men across the nation protested "Uncle Sam Wants You to Die for Israel" by shunning military recruiting offices in droves. "It looks like we'll actually have less than usual," said Major Tom Stokowski of the Portland Army Recruiting Battalion, according to the "Oregonian" newspaper, following Bush's speech. Nationalists predicted that a patriotic backlash against all aliens — for violent attacks, as well as economic oppression — would work to defeat Bush's New-World-Order plans and usher in America-First policies, which neither the Taliban nor Mossad, Hollywood nor Wall Street, could halt. ■ another anomaly...

The man who designed the WTC was interviewed on a news broadcast. He was clearly puzzled that the buildings collapsed. He said that steel encased in concrete would take about three hours to reach a dangerously high temperature, yet the buildings collapsed within an hour and a half.

Also, what happened to the sprinkler system? Anyone who has poured water on a camp fire knows that great clouds of steam are produced. I did not see any steam whatsoever emanating from the WTC fire. Just thick black smoke. Is it possible the sprinklers were disabled, or the reservoirs were drained prior to the attack?

You are correct here too..we had jet fires on aircraft carriers all the time... it won't melt the steel.. one night at 3 AM I was watching the news and they cranked up the volume... I heard all kinds of explosions on the film footage, they never did it again.

A dreaded thought just occurred to me...

Whenever you see workmen cutting through steel at a construction site, what are they using? I believe it's an oxy-acetylene torch. To get a flame hot enough to melt steel, the fuel (acetylene) has to be mixed with pure oxygen. Just acetylene won't do it.

My guess is that the same is true for jet fuel. When it burns in the ordinary atmosphere we all breath, it doesn't get that hot. I don't think jet fuel burns much hotter than ordinary gasoline. Certainly not hot enough to melt, or even soften steel. Our automobile engines don't melt when we drive down the road. Even after a terrible car fire, the engine is always intact.

Remember back in Philly there was a high rise building that caught fire? It was so old it had no sprinklers. The fire raged for days. Yet the building still stood. So, what happened on 9-11? Why am I getting a very bad feeling about this?

Did you know that:

- * non-Jewish Israelis are prohibited from buying or leasing land in Israel?
- * automobile license plates in Israel and the occupied territories are color-coded to distinguish Jews from non-Jews?
- * in the occupied territories Israeli authorities allocate 85% of the water resources for the tiny Jewish population, and the remaining 15% for the vastly larger Arab population? In Hebron, for example, 85% of the water is set aside for some 400 Jewish "settlers", whilst 15% must be divided among Hebron's 120,000 non-Jews?
- * the USA provides Israel with $5 billion in aid annually? Annual US aid to Israel exceeds annual US aid to all the sub-Saharan African countries combined?
- * Israel is the only Mid-east nation with nuclear weapons? Israel is the only Mid-east nation refusing to sign the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty, and also bars international inspection of its sites?
